Libraries have long been fonts of knowledge, places to get answers and indulge in an orgy of curiosity. In days past libraries could only be found in private homes, universities or monasteries, their resources available only to the privileged few.

With the advent of free public libraries, that changed drastically. Now the wisdom of the ages is available to anyone with the interest to come to the library and check it out. Libraries have attempted to offer what the people using them have desired.

Upland Library, said director Linda Yao, tries hard to keep up with the needs and desires of the community it serves. "We try to serve everyone and when we become aware of a need that we may be a little weak in serving, we try to fill in the gap," she said.

With budget cuts and the rising cost of materials, that isn't always easy. "Books are expensive and we recognize our commitment to keep a comprehensive body of knowledge — the history of what is going on in all areas — and make sure it's always up to date," she said.

Like any other budget-minded group, the library sets aside money for the required things but also targets funds for special needs.

"Some people say we censor what goes into the library but we are not the only ones who select materials for the library. People who use the library often dictate that we need more on a particular subject. We just get the pulse of the community and then make the final decision," she said.

But despite their efforts, Yao conceded, in some areas they never fill the need. "On subjects like parapsychology and witchcraft, we never Whether active or sedentary, the library offers something for the enjoyment of all. keep up with the demand. A few years ago there must have been a baby-boom in Upland because even though we had more than 30 books on pregnancy, whenever we took a patron over to show them what we had, there was never even one there."

But, Yao said, the library is not just a place to borrow books (there are 90,000 volumes to choose from). "We see a public library as a reference center for the community. We help people make the small daily decisions (like what insurance company best serves their needs, how to make a souffle or where scholarships are being offered), we provide a vast selection of cultural material and, of course, have a very comprehensive reference department."

Yao said they are proud of their reference department. "A lot of young adults use the library as a place for research and we feel we are offering a wide selection of the material they need," she said.

"In a small community like Upland, we have a commitment to serve everyone, not just children or students," she said. For that reason, they are continually expanding their offerings. The library also offers programs, displays, and a loan program for prints, sculpture, records and cassettes.

Yao said they have also developed a Community Resource Directory that she describes as "rather unique" for a library the size of Upland. "We are very proud of the directory," she said, "it offers a comprehensive and easy to read listing of all the resources available in Upland." The directory was compiled and gathered by the reference staff and volunteers. It is updated each year.

Marie Rooth, children's librarian, said she feels the continuing programs provided in her section serve to stimulate interest in the library and awaken an interest in learning.

Reading Day at the Library was held at the beginning of the month. It was sponsored by the International Reading Association, Foothill Council; the San Bernardino County Superintendent of Schools, the Upland Library and the Friends of the Library.

Children (and their parents) gathered in the quad area in the front of the library for activities that included making buttons, book bindings and bookmarks, and choral reading.

Enveloped by a country fair atmosphere, participants were able to view performances of the Reide Marionettes, apply for a library card, hear story readings, watch Courtney Brooks and her puppets and pick out new favorites at the book sale.

"We try to offer something for all ages. The Reading Day seemed to be very well received, as was the Kite Flying contest we had in March," Rooth said.

Among the continuing programs are a pre-school story time at 10:30 on Thursday mornings, special movie programs during the vacation times, presentations for older children (dramatic readings), class visits and group tours, showings of video disc movies during lunch time and standard children's library services.

Plans are being made for the second annual Mad Hatter Tea Party on May 24 and, Rooth said, the summer reading game, A Feast of Beastly Reading, already has 50 children pre-registered.

"The summer reading game always has about 500 children involved and we expect even more this summer," Rooth said.

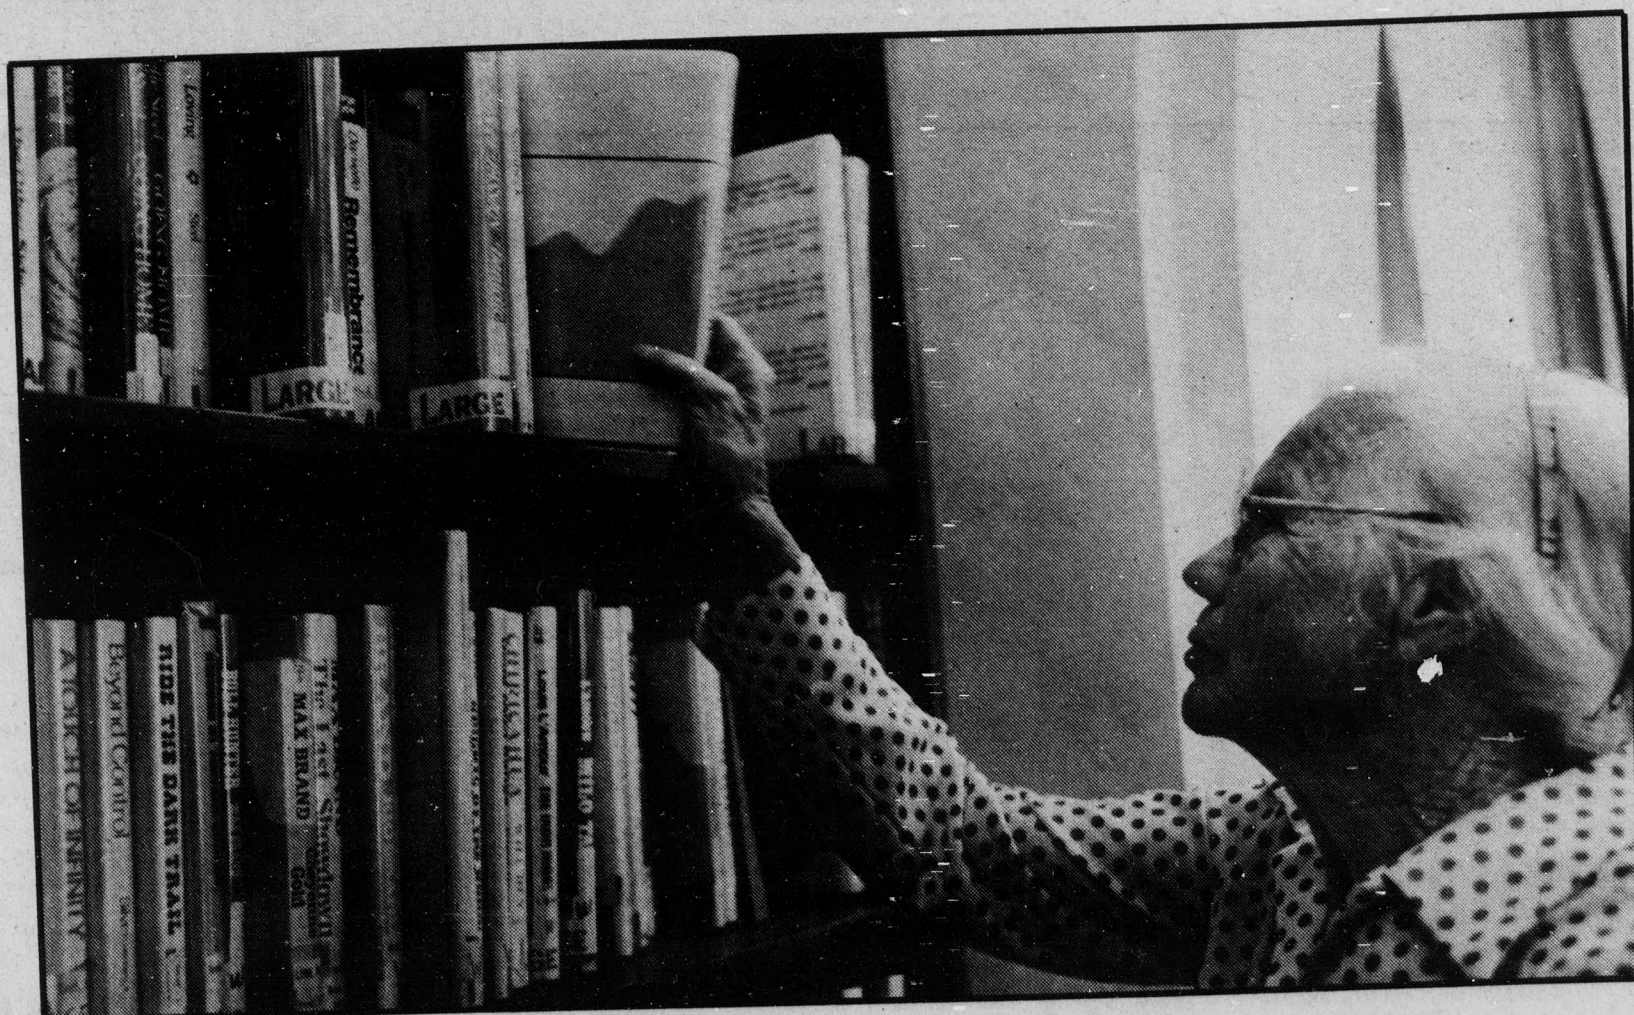

It is open to children of any age and offers reading guidance structured around fun, programs, movies, arts and crafts. "The children don't even realize they are being guided, they are having such a good time," she said.

Right now, Rooth said, they are looking for volunteers, sixth grade and up, to help with a June 27 to Aug. 19 program. Anyone interested in volunteering may contact Rooth at the library.

"We just want to get people thinking...there's something going on at the library all the time," she said. □

GOP women to hear speaker on topic of child molestation

"Robbery of the Innocent" will be the subject of a special meeting of Republican Women, Federated on April 27 at the Arbor Restaurant, Upland.

"One of the aims of our group is to become well-informed citizens regarding political matters but we also endeavor to offer opportunities for our members to learn about other public issues of concern and interest to everyone," said Suzy Carter, publicity chairman.

Carter said in an effort to foster public awareness of the growing problem of child molestation they were extending an invitation to local service clubs, civic organizations and youth and community groups to attend the meeting to hear guest speaker Det. Dick Vance.

Vance, with the Montebello Police Department for more than 17 years, is assigned as Juvenile Bureau investigator. He is recognized as one of the leading experts on the problem of child molestation in Southern California.

During his presentation, he will convey how to protect our children, how to detect suspicious behavior of adults around children as well as how to treat a child who has been molested.

Vance will bring several tapes of convicted child molesters to let those attending hear firsthand how the molester thinks and works.

Vance is currently a lecturer on this subject in the Southern California area and an instructor at Rio Hondo Police Academy.

He is a graduate University of Southern California's Delinquency Control Institute.

Cost per person is $9 and deadline for reservations is April 22. For information or reservations call Jo Ann, 982-9950 or Maggie, 982-7546. No-host social hour begins at 6.

It was the third trophy for the Upland school's eighth grade jazz band, which netted the first place award. The second place award was the first for the school's seventh grade band.

Two groups plan awards dinner

Inland Empire Council of the Boy Scouts of America and National Medical Enterprises, Inc. (NME), have announced their plans to cosponsor an awards banquet honoring community leaders for their contributions to San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

Scheduled in June, details of the event will be finalized during the next few weeks.

Ron Messenger, senior vice president Southwest Region of NME's Hospital Group, also pledged the company's support for a local Boy Scout memorial where the names of honorees would be permanently inscribed.

The awards banquet will offer businesses, associations and individuals the opportunity to support Boy Scout programs for local youth.

Robert Rigney, Boy Scouts Inland Empire Council president, indicated the organization hopes to raise $60,000 from the banquet.

"Our program today involves a greater number of handicapped and low income groups," Rigney said. "We need support from companies such as NME and community involvement in order to give boys and girls a chance to belong."

Health Fair Expo set for three locations

that checks for diabetes, cholesterol, liver/kidney function and 20 other blood chemistries, as well as an EKG (electro-cardiogram) with a physician's reading. For female attendees there will be a Pap test and breast exam available for another $8.

Organizers call the $8 blood test the biggest bargain in town. It will be offered at all locations. Analysis will be provided by Central Diagnostic Laboratory in Tarzana.

The Health Fair concept has spread to 95 participating sites with an estimated 65 to 70,000 people expected to participate. Officials say more than 248,000 Southland residents have been screened during past Health Expos.

The event will include health screenings for adults while some sites will also screen children over the age of three.

Rising medical costs and economic stress accounts for some of the attraction of Health Fair Expo. However, its overwhelming success is also due to the more than 15,000 medical and lay volunteers representing hundreds of medical, professional and community organizations that handle everything connected with the Fair.

According to statistics published by the National Health Screening Council of Volunteer Organizations, Inc. in 1982, the Southern California Health Fair Expo ranked first in the nation among 28 other fairs in attracting more than 68,000 participants.

Upland man victim of crippling MS

By David Miller

First it was his left eye. Then it was his legs, his hearing and, most recently, his left hand. Little by little, for the last 15 years, Greg A'Lurede has been losing control of his body to multiple sclerosis.

Multiple sclerosis. MS. It attacks the central nervous system, destroying the insulation around nerve endings and blocking electrical impulses from traveling from the brain and spinal cord to other parts of the body.

It is a disease of the central nervous system, one with no cure and no definitive cause, although there is some speculation that it may be viral-related. Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of the disease, according to A'Lurede, is the lack of definitive symptoms: MS affects each of its victims differently.

"There's no way of knowing what it will do to you, so they can't tell you what to expect," he says.

The Upland man is far from being alone. According to Audrey Goldman, director of social services at the Multiple Sclerosis Society in Glendale, there are roughly 500,000 persons in the United States suffering from neurological disorders (including strokes). About half that many are victims of multiple sclerosis.

"It is not hereditary, it is not terminal and it is not contagious," Goldman says. "What actually happens is the insulation around the nerve breaks down and that's what causes the interruptions."

She says that MS is sometimes referred to as a "disease of young adults." The earliest onset is at about the age of 15, but the most common years are between 20 and 40.

A'Lurede, 37, has had multiple sclerosis for 15 years - since he was 22 - "but I walked for 10 of it." A former "heavy duty" truck mechanic, he has adopted a pragmatic approach to coping with the disease, which has left him confined to a wheelchair for about the last five years.

Its affects, progressing gradually in the form of remissions which have served to rob him of a little more control of his body each time, have taken their toll physically. But while A'Lurede admits to occasional periods of depression, his outlook remains positive.

"In 1968, one morning I woke up and I started talking funny," A'Lurede says. "The left side of my mouth wasn't working properly."

He was originally diagnosed as having Bell's palsy, or paralysis of the facial nerve. Subsequent diagnoses suggested either a brain tumor or multiple sclerosis, but the symptoms of both later disappeared.

It wasn't until 1978 that he was confirmed to have MS. He began favoring his right leg after being burned in a fire in the family garage in 1972, and the problems grew progressively worse with time.

For a time, A'Lurede went through periods of remission, each time coming out with a little less, but in recent years the deterioration has been gradual. "My left hand has been numb for about three years now. It feels like it's asleep," he says.

"When it came on me in 1978 when I was going into remission, I could push a wheelchair in front of me and I could walk."

He could also drive a car then by using his left foot, but now he must rely on hand controls and is almost totally dependent upon his wheelchair to get around.

"You wake up one morning and find you have to use a wheelchair to get around, so you use a wheelchair to get around. That's just the way it is."

A'Lurede was able to perform truck maintenance and repair up until about five years ago, when he could still stand under his own power. Lately, however, his work has been confined to talking people through the steps as they do work on their vehicles themselves, with A'Lurede serving as a sort of mentor and coach.

"He used to be able to stand up along side his truck and hold himself up while he worked, but he can't anymore," says David Kiley, director of the community wheelchair sports program at Casa Colina Hospital for Rehabilitative Medicine in Pomona.

"I can't do those kinds of things anymore, but I'm still a mechanic at heart," A'Lurede says.

He has known Kiley since 1979, when he first became involved with the basketball team at Casa Colina. Kiley, also confined to a wheelchair, has been coach and a top player for the Casa Colina Condors, who recently won their third national wheelchair basketball title. A'Lurede, unable to play for the team, does maintenance work and makes travel arrangements for the squad instead.

To Kris, A'Lurede's wife, her husband's relationship with the Condors has been a Godsend. "We've been really fortunate to be associated with the basketball team," she says. "When Greg left the VA Hospital (in Long Beach), they just put him in a wheelchair and said 'There you go.'"

However, the atmosphere around Casa Colina is a little more sensitive to A'Lurede's condition and needs. All members of the basketball team are also disabled, but the players, their wives and families don't look upon being confined to a wheelchair as a handicap.

"They do things and go places just like any non-disabled person would," Kris A'Lurede says.

"I probably need the association with the team, so I try to make myself as useful as possible," A'Lurede says. He admits, however, that the disease has made it increasingly difficult for him to accompany the team when it travels to away games.

"It's gotten to the point where I don't function very well in motel rooms, like getting in and out of restrooms," he says.

In the past, when A'Lurede wanted to take a shower, he would set his chair outside the restroom, prop himself up and hobble into the shower. He was usually able to make it back to his chair afterwards. Now, however, his body is especially susceptible to heat, and showers usually leave him too weak to make it back to his chair.

The disease has also taken its toll on the amount of tasks he can perform around the house. "They're extremely limited, much to my wife's dismay," A'Lurede says. "I take the trash out."

Kris, on the other hand, is gradually becoming adept at handling the chores previously covered by her husband. "He's a good teacher," she says. "I'm getting real talented at yardwork and electrical things."

But, she says, "It really gets frustrating at times."

"I can't do all the things around the house that I used to," A'Lurede says. "And Kris hasn't quite mastered plumbing yet, but she's learning."

The problems, and the frustration,

See river birds, wild donkeys on canoe float down Colorado

River birds, wild donkeys and reedy sandbars can be spotted on a 16-mile canoe float through the Topock Gorge Wildlife Refuge during an Upland Recreation Department excursion to Lake Havasu May 20-22.

Besides the canoe trip on the Colorado River, upstream from Lake Havasu City, Ariz., participants can use their 250-mile trip for another advantage, gambling at any of the seven casinos in nearby Laughlin, Nev.

Those making the trip "should be in good physical shape," recreation supervisor Cyndi Testa said. Of the 79 that took last year's trip, several were elderly, she said.

"You don't have to paddle the whole way. You can stay in the current," she said, although intrepid explorers will have to paddle into inlets.

Testa said reservations will probably be limited to one bus load, with transportation, two nights lodging in Lake Havasu City, and equipment rental costing $79 per person, for double occupancy.

Those interested should leave a 50 percent deposit by Friday at the Upland Recreation Department's new location, 433 N. Second Ave. Further information can be obtained by calling 985-0994.

The five-hour bus trip for Havasu City departs about 6:30 p.m. Friday from the recreation department, ending that night at a Holiday Inn.

After an early breakfast

Saturday, the bus will travel 30 miles north to the Topock Golden Shores Marina where canoes will be launched.

The downstream glide through sandbars, rocky cliffs and marshes of the national wildlife refuge includes lunch and lasts from six to eight hours, ending at Castle Rock.

The bus will take the river-riders back to the hotel, and from 4 p.m. on, they will be on their own for dinner.

Before returning Upland, the participants are to travel Sunday to the London Bridge in Havasu City, departing about 1:30 p.m., and stopping at Hadley's dried fruit store in Cabazon.

They are to reach Upland about 7:30 p.m.

'Huggers' needed for Special Olympics

The Special Olympics needs you Saturday.

Another 100 people are needed to supplement 200 who have already volunteered to help run events and be athlete "huggers" at the Western San Bernardino Special Olympics meet.

Upland High School is the Olympic arena where more than 500 athletes, between the ages of 3 and 93, from Ontario to Fontana, start track and field and gymnastic events at 9 a.m. Afternoon events include basketball and swimming.

Volunteers need no experience, only a willingness to reward the special athletes with a warm hug, said Gail Corsaro, an Olympic organizer for the Ontario Recreation Department.

Anyone interested in experiencing a "new kind of joy" working with this special group should contact either Upland's or Ontario's recreation department, 989-0994 or 989-1151, ext. 708, transcend into other areas as well. The MS often makes his hand tremble, and several checks that he has written have been returned by his bank due to an "irregular" signature.

"It's not just the things that able-bodied people can do that I can't. It's the things that the guys on the basketball team can do that I can't," A'Lurede says.

"Dave Kiley will come to an eight-inch curb and he'll just jump right over it (with his wheelchair). I can't do that, and it frustrates me."

"It bothers him when he can't do the things that he used to be able to do," Kris says. "And we were told that we wouldn't be able to have children, so we were really excited when we had Kevin."

Kevin, 4, is the couple's only child. His parents say that, despite his youth, the boy seems perceptive to his father's situation and to the needs of other disabled persons.

"I have been in a wheelchair all of his life," A'Lurede says. "He calls it 'multiple grosis.' I'll accept that. It is pretty gross."

Kevin has also been the source of humorous situations around the A'Lurede home. He learned very quickly how to get away with doing something he wasn't supposed to and not worry about getting caught at it.

"Greg would say 'Don't do that,' and if he was sitting on the couch, Kevin would come in and move the chair just far enough away so that his dad couldn't get to him," Kris says.

According to the A'Luredes, few people seem to know anything about multiple sclerosis. "Sometimes they will ask you if it's like something else, like muscular dystrophy," Greg says. "And you can't really say what it's like because it affects everybody differently."

The couple says that children are usually the ones who will inquire about Greg's situation. "We don't mind talking about it," Kris says. "It's usually the parents who get embarrassed."

Says Greg: "If kids want to know, I'll tell them. And I'll try to tell them in a way that they can understand."

"Why are you in a wheelchair?"

"Because I can't walk."

"Why can't you walk?"

"Because my legs won't work."

"There is absolutely nothing wrong with my legs," A'Lurede says. "It's just that my brain can't tell them what to do."

A'Lurede views his condition rather matter-of-factly, as in "this is my situation so this is the way it's going to be." The fact that the deterioration process has been gradual, plus the fact that some persons have fought back to regain some body functions thought lost to respectively.

The Olympic purpose: "A training program for athletic competition, giving a way for the mentally retarded to be successful," Corsaro said.

Three individuals at the same competitive level vie in each event for the prize, with each awarded a ribbon and a hug.

About 40 athletes in Saturday's games will compete in a statewide Special Olympics to be held on June 25 in Berkeley.

The Western San Bernardino meet is being sponsored by agencies that help mentally retarded people. Participants will be from Salem Christian Home, Virginia Primrose School in Fontana and Rancho Cucamonga, Ontario, Rialto and Colton recreation departments.

An added incentive is encouraging Weight Watchers to walk as fast as possible in an attempt to "Walk Around the World." MS, have kept his outlook practical, if not positive.

"There have been people who have had MS and have been in a wheelchair who have come out of it and walked again," A'Lurede says.

"It can happen. So you have to take every day as an individual. It may be my personality, it may be my gradually coming into it, but you wake up one morning and find you have to use a wheelchair to get around, so you use a wheelchair to get around. That's just the way it is.

"With an accident, all of a sudden part of your body doesn't work any more. But because mine's been gradual, I've just kind of accepted it, I guess."

The A'Luredes have been assisted in their attempts to cope with Greg's condition by persons involved with the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, which offers special programs for families that have a member suffering from MS.

But mostly, A'Lurede says, it is a matter of trying to adjust each time the disease leads to another change in his body. One recent adjustment is that the A'Luredes have had to purchase special shoes and clothing to make it easier for Greg to dress himself.

"MS affects so many things," he says. "It affects my vision, it affects my hearing. You learn other ways to do things.

"I'm going to have to learn how to pull my pants on sitting down. I can still stand - I don't have a whole lot of balance - but I can still stand.

Upland man makes clean sweep of outstanding employee award

By Andrea Adelson

Keith Smith's father lost his Kansas farm and everything else in the Great Depression.

That event and the forced migration of the family to California in 1936 made a lasting impression on Smith.

He lives a day at a time, and takes pride in performing his job as Upland's chief street sweeper, daily cleaning 25-miles of streets like each one was outside his own house.

He is slow to anger when someone shakes a fist at him.

"All these people are my bosses," he says, gesturing outside the air-conditioned confines of his $70,000 street sweeper.

"It's their money, but it doesn't pay to get upset. You don't accomplish anything. Some people get kind of hot, but I talk real nice," he says.

Those of quicker temper have sometimes offered him a conciliatory glass of lemonade on the next trip around, he says.

"You have to have patience. You can't get sassy," says the 57-year-old father of three grown children.

After 36 years as a city worker — 20 of those on a sweeper — his attributes of loyalty, patience and conscientiousness earned him the city's first outstanding employee award.

"He's an exemplary employee, the kind that never asks for a pat on the back. So we decided to give him one," personnel director Mary Ann Reiss said.

Department heads nominated contestants, but Smith's community involvement was a deciding factor in his selection.

"It's not a classy job," he says, grasping one of two steering wheels on the noisy sweeper that sucks up dirt and leaves with the 120 mph force of a cyclone.

Sierra Vista School teacher Dan Bathauer and assistant "fuel" Montgolfier II as they prepare to launch the tissue paper hot-air balloon.

Upland teacher, pupils launch hot-air balloon

By David Miller

The launch and guidance personnel conducted last-minute checks on the Montgolfier II as the small hot-air balloon was made ready for launch.

In addition, while project director Dan Bathauer looked on, another crew began the process of creating the heat that would be the balloon's primary source of power.

And, shortly after 9 a.m. on the morning of April 14, the Montgolfier II, much to the delight of its dedicated crew, quickly filled with hot air and rose into the heavens, remaining airborne for all of 49.43 seconds.

Bathauer is a teacher at Sierra Vista School in Upland, and the crew members of this and subsequent flights are members of his combined class of third and fourth graders. It is Bathauer's sixth straight year of directing the project.

The Montgolfier II, named after Jacques and Joseph Montgolfier, who launched the first hot-air balloon in June 1783, was constructed by Bathauer's students and is made almost entirely of tissue paper and glue, save for a wire rim at the opening to provide support and help trap the heat. It is six-feet high when fully inflated.

The two dozen children in the class are each given specific tasks to assist with the project, including timers and several youngsters who were given the task of responding to questions posed by the press.

Merrilynne Altmeyer, the student responsible for the historical background on the flights from Sierra Vista, hinted that this year's crew has a long way to go before challenging the school's record for longest flight time.

"The time we are trying to beat was three minutes and 29 seconds in 1979," Merrilynne said. "And we've done six flights with this balloon."

The longest flight thus far in the current school year has been one minute and 3.91 seconds.

Joshua Klein described the process of creating the heat for powering the balloon, which consisted of placing paper inside a metal furnace structure and then setting fire to the paper. The balloon itself is held above the furnace by members of the flight and guidance crews.

"When the paper burns the air becomes hot and

Man makes clean sweep of employee award

But compared to his now-deceased father, Meryl, who worked a split shift as a milker seven days each week, Smith said he has nothing to complain about.

Starting his rounds scouring the town at 6 a.m. each day and at midnight on Fridays, Smith has devoted his afternoons to Upland youth baseball teams.

He passed up a chance to play semi-professional baseball for $250-a-week when drafted in 1942.

"If I'd been that good, I'd have gone in, but you have to be outstanding," he said.

After his discharge from the Navy, he returned to Upland and the diamond when his son wanted to play ball.

"When I see those coaches chewing those kids out... if my son is going to play ball, I don't want to see him chewed out," Smith recalls.

"Some coaches are too tough," he says.

By taking baseball a little less seriously than others and rewarding his ball players with praise, Smith inspired his team to four National League championships from 1966 to 1970.

"I don't think that's been matched," he said.

Two years from now, "I plan to hang it up," and retire with his wife, Shirley, in Sedona, Ariz.

Viewpoint

Upturn in economy may portend change in area

Interest rates are down and all indicators point to an upturn in our economy. Companies are beginning to hire again and there is a renewed sense of optimism in the business community.

These conditions will make the next few years a time of opportunity and change in our valley. With these changes in our economy, what can we look forward to in this area?

Many families and couples that have been unable or unwilling to purchase homes during the last three years because of high interest rates will now be able to do so.

Sales at new housing communities have increased dramatically in the last eight weeks. This is primarily because of the return of lower interest rates accompanied with the return of 30-year mortgages at fixed rates.

Many home shoppers were confused and skeptical of the "alphabet soup" of mortgage instruments that arose in 1982. As rates have come down and stabilized, these home shoppers are deciding to buy now while the opportunity is available.

Historically, a drop in interest rates is followed by an increase in new construction. Unfortunately, shortages of building materials and trained manpower often are a short-term result of renewed construction activity, and 1983 should be prove to be no exception to this. Prices of new homes and apartments should go up in the third and fourth quarters of this year as a result of these shortages.

Likewise, the value of all resale homes will appreciate substantially after the leveling off period of the last three years, but it is unlikely that we will see the wild inflation of the late 70s.

Instead it seems reasonable to expect housing prices for resale homes should begin to appreciate at an annual rate of 6 to 10 percent in the near future.

New housing will take on different appearances during this next phase of building activity. There is a trend toward more sophisticated land use and architectural design resulting from increases in land and building costs.

it moves into the balloon," Joshua said. None of the flights of the Montgolfier II are manned. David Clucas noted that the first "manned" flight of a Montgolfier brothers balloon carried a crew of a rooster, a sheep and a duck.

David said the French pair got the idea after watching smoke rise in their fireplace. They experimented by filling bags with smoke, which they thought would cause the bags to inflate and then rise, but they eventually discovered that it was really heat that caused the action.

KIDS make a difference

Some students at Upland Elementary School have found a convenient way to cover the cost of their school lunches:

They work one and two week stints in the school's cafeteria, and during that time they receive their mid-day meal for free.

All are recruited from the upper grades at the school, which has 400 students in grades kindergarten through sixth. Student crews, which assist the two-person cafeteria staff in taking lunch tickets, serving food and cleaning trays, are rotated every two weeks.

The rotation moves from teacher's room to teacher's room in order to give as many students as possible an opportunity to work for their lunches. The students work six minutes out of each of the school's three daily lunch periods, and assist during the pre-school breakfast period as well.

Bea Ennis, manager of the cafeteria staff, says the students make "a whole bunch of difference" in the every day functioning of the cafeteria. "I'd never be able to do it without them," she says.

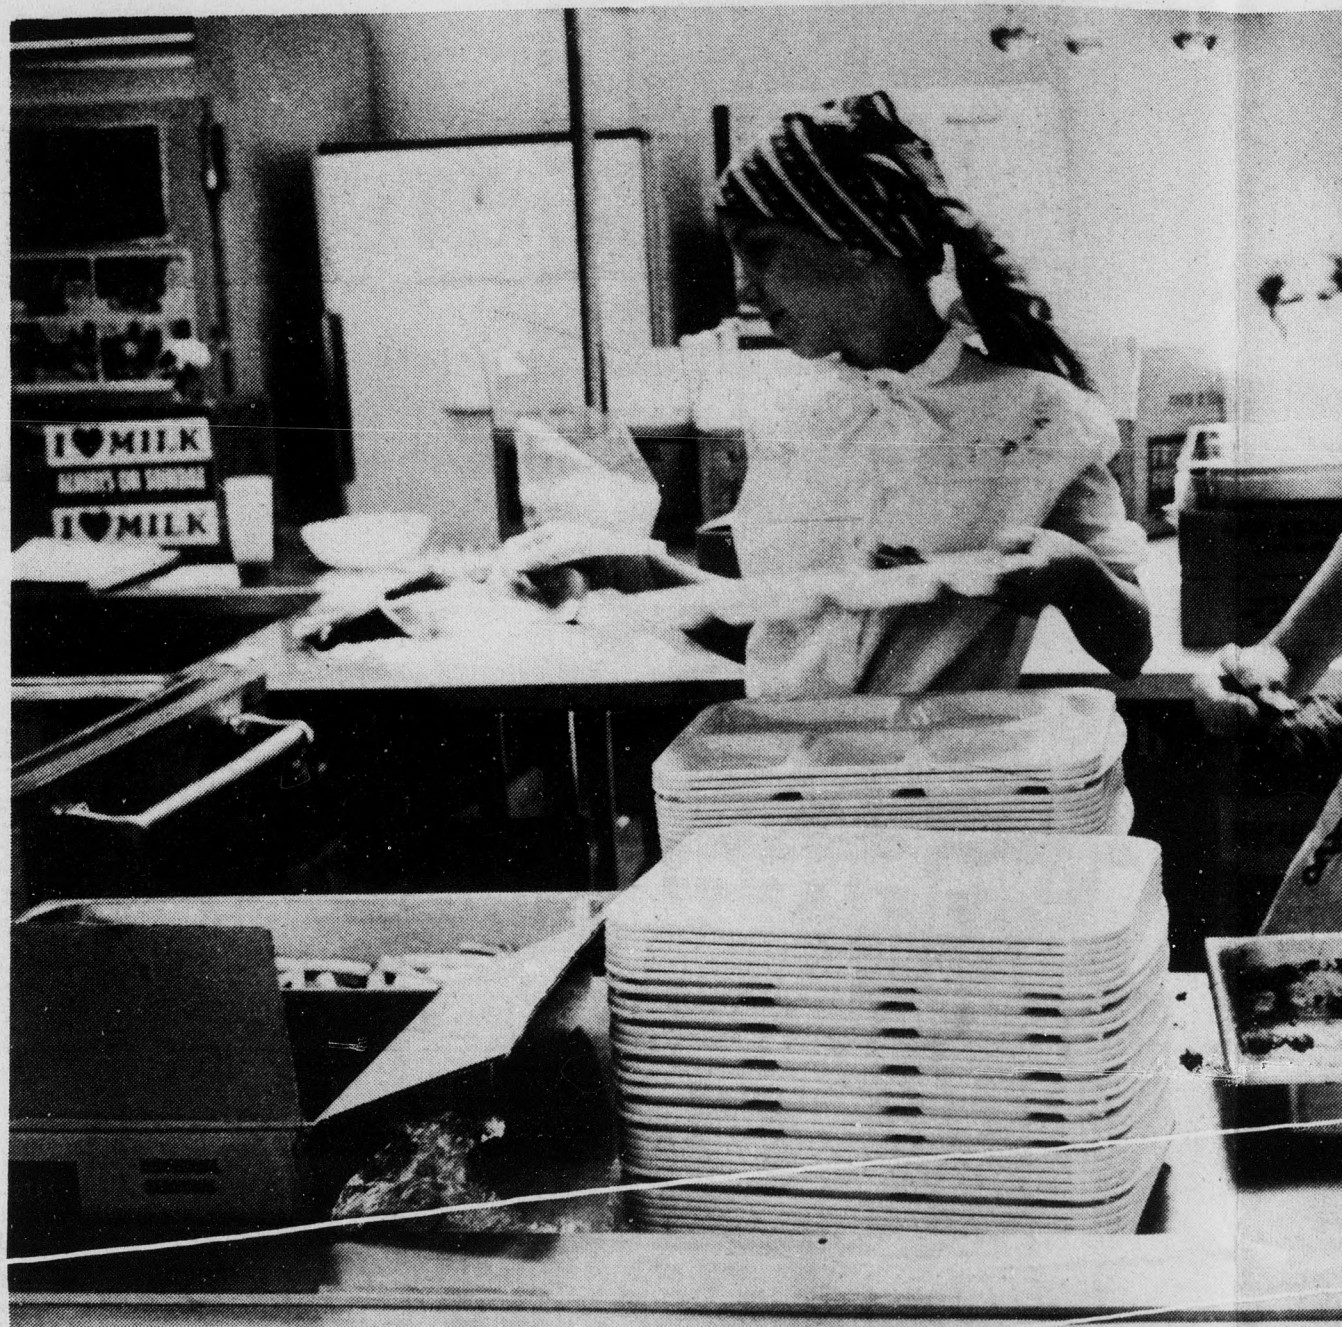

Principal David Bardin says the program is so popular that some students request to be on the crews again and again, but must be turned down so that more students will be given the opportunity to work.

"It's an area where kids can serve kids, can feel good about it and get a small reward in return," he says.

Sixth grader Tina Romo, one of 12 students on the present crew, says the work is "fun" and provides an incentive that many students find hard to refuse.

"We get cheap lunch for it," says Tina, a long-time veteran of cafeteria lunch duty.

Cindy Rivera, another sixth grader, has been helping in the cafeteria for three years now. In addition to the benefits of helping her classmates and getting lunch at a discount, Cindy has found another plus in working on the lunch crew: "I get to miss my P.E. class," she says. □

Increase arthritis awareness in May

May is National Arthritis Month. Arthritis is the nation's number onecrippler and affects people of all ages, including children and adults in the prime of their lives.

More than 30 million Americans are affected by the disease that lasts a lifetime and has no known cure. According to statistics, arthritis is second only to heart problems as the cause of disability payments.

Arthritis is an inflammation of the joint and can be any of more than 100 different rheumatic diseases. Each of the diseases has different symptoms and requires different treatments.

Crippling arthritis is not strictly an "old folks" disease — it strikes children as well.

Some of the warning signs are: persistent pain and stiffness on arising; pain or swelling in one or more joints; tingling sensations in the fingertips, present structure of the Montgolfier II - the average flight lasts for approximately one minute - Bathauer said that no plans are being made to try for longer flights with larger balloons, which would in the least involve switching from making the balloons out of tissue paper to cloth.

"It would be a lot of fun, but with the cutbacks nowadays I don't know if we'd be able to buy the cloth," he said.

The present format seems to keep the children busy, anyway. They appear to be content with the Montgolfier II as it is, although there are some indications that their patience may not hold out forever, and the children may one day push for more sophisticated materials that would allow for longer flight times. "We had one real long flight," Bathauer said. "One landed in the (telephone) wires, and it wouldn't come down. The kids were still timing."

Trautwein's well-kept tennis secret

Paul Trautwein is sitting on top of the best kept secret around the West Valley.

It's not as if he's trying to keep people from finding out just how good his Upland High School boys tennis team really is. But as long as they continue to win, he's quite content with their current role as the unknown giant.

With Saturday's win over visiting Webb, the Highlanders raised their record to a perfect 12-0. In Baseline League action, Upland is tied with Damien, each team sporting 8-0 marks.

Trautwein is aware that the difference between winning and losing can be a very slight matter in high school team tennis.

"I've always told my players that you can have the three best tennis players in the world on your team and it doesn't mean a thing. The best those three players can do is score 12 points," explains Trautwein. "You need 14 points to tie, 15 to clinch a win. That means you have to have depth."

For the Upland coach, that's a simple fact of life. Depth, he is his club's strong point, along with youth.

"We're not a team of superstars," he jokes, "which is not to say some of these guys might not be some day. It's kind of strange, but we seem to have just the right mixture of experience and youth, a perfect blend you might say. It wasn't something that was planned, just something that happened."

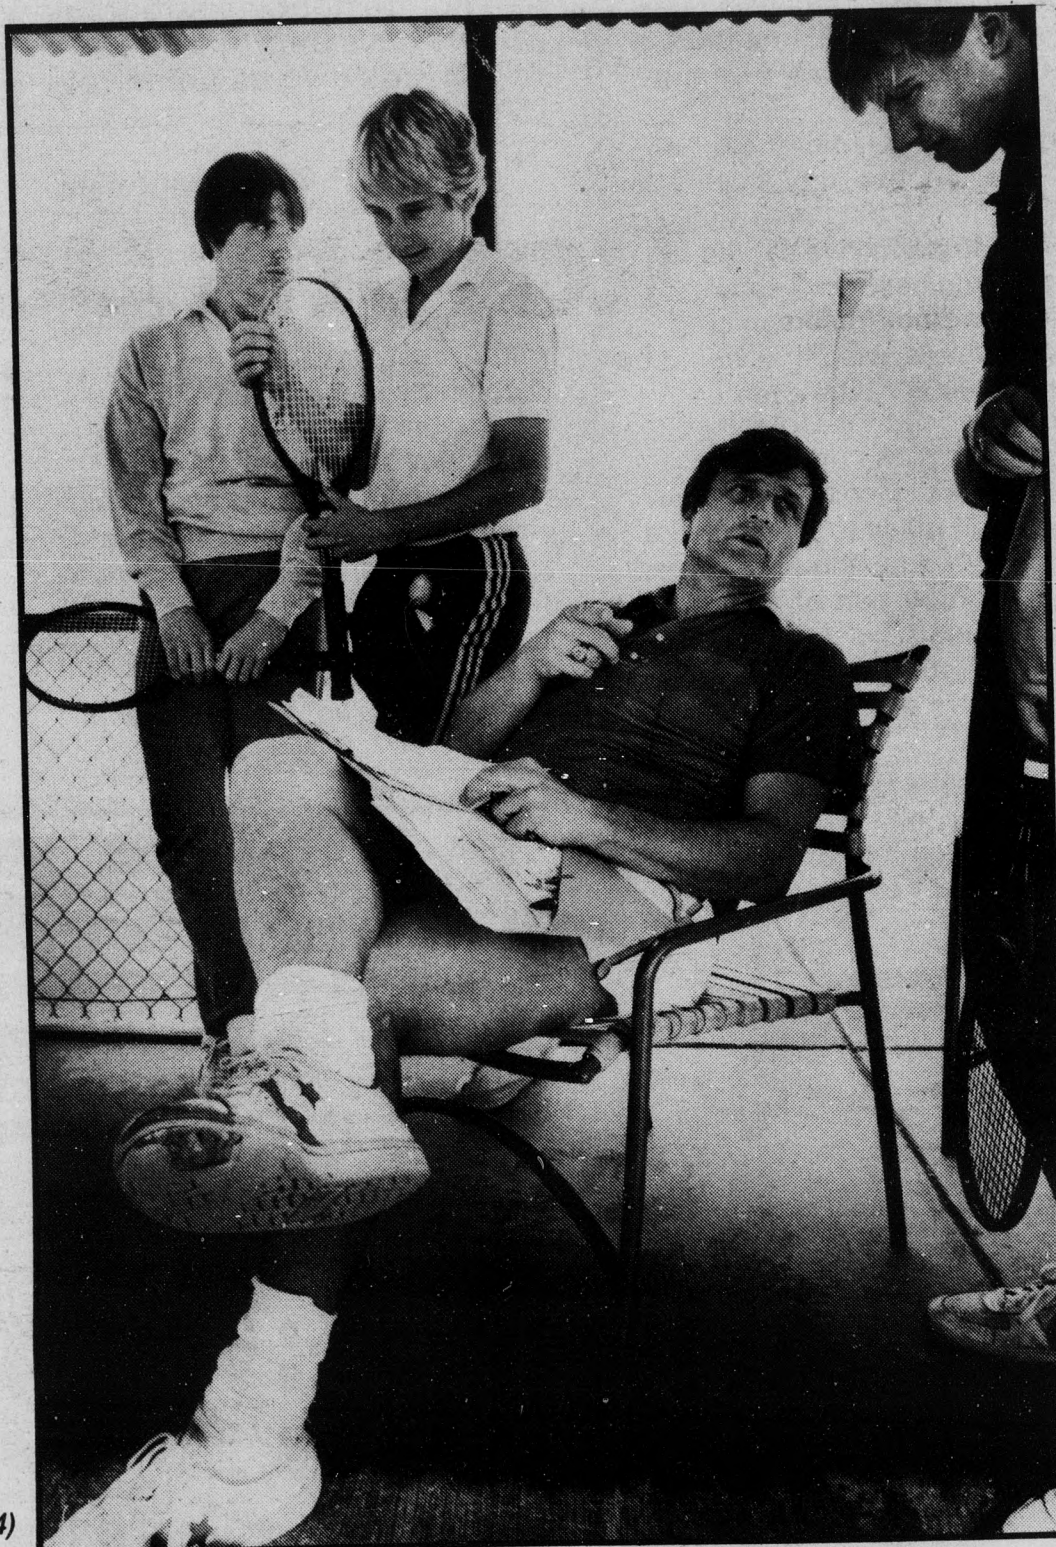

Of his top 10 players ("my main squad"), five are freshmen and three are seniors, with two juniors to fill the 'generation' gap. Yet when they get out on the court, Trautwein insists there's no one out to pull rank, just a team out to win.

So far, it's working.

The seniors include Ronn McMahon, Darin Skaggs and Magnus Andersson, with Sidney Suarez and Milan Lubanko the team's junior class members.

Sean Suarez (Sidney's brother), David Lin, Keith Wurtz, Steve

Kobold and Greg Skaggs (Darin's brother) make up the bumper crop of freshman that Trautwein feels will keep the Scots in the thick of the Baseline tennis race for the next four years.

"It's hard to predict the future, but if we keep the kids healthy and get any kind of freshmen and transfer students, we should be solid for the next few years. Getting another freshman crop like this year's, well, that would be too much to ask," he adds.

Rounding out the Upland squad are seniors Mark Wiczorek, Gary Collins, Mark Harwich and Pat Vollmer, all ready to come in at a moment's notice should the need arrive, a critical part of Trautwein's bench strength.

"With all the rain we've had, it's been my own estimations on who

'This is potentially one of my best teams ever. We have neither the kind of experience that team (1981) had nor its doubles strength. But we have depth, and our young kids give us unlimited potential.'

ranks where on our ladder. We've only just been able to complete an inter-squad tournament to see just who is best," explains the Highlander mentor. "I'd like to think we're as good as anyone in our league at this point."

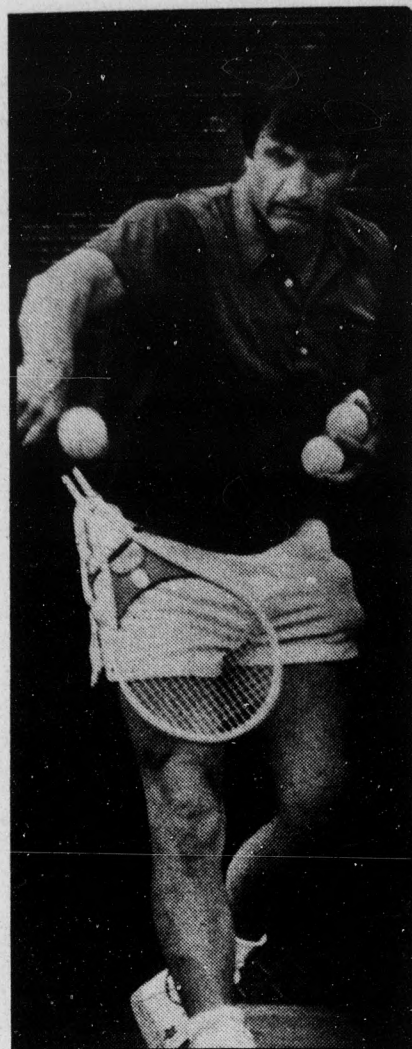

A recent victory over perennial power Claremont was a big step for the Highlanders, since the two clubs usually split their two dual matches during league play. But with another round still ahead, Trautwein knows there's still a lot to tennis to play before he can confidently talk about the CIF playoffs.

He ranks Damien and Claremont (along with as his team) as the ones jockeying for possible CIF 2A berths out of the league. But from there, he knows it is an uphill struggle just to reach the team semi-finals.

Two years ago, Upland reached the third round of the playoffs, only to be ousted by powerhouse San Clemente. While he refuses to predict or compare the 1981 squad to this season's club, he is willing to credit his '83 club with a favorable comparison.

"This is potentially one of my best teams ever," he says, quickly admitting that "I hate trying to compare teams. We have neither the kind of experience that team had nor its doubles strength. But we have depth, and our young kids give us unlimited potential." □

Tennis relief

Carol Cox excels in unusual role

By Phil Barnett

Ask the popular question "How do you spell relief?" and most sports fans respond with traditional answers, such as Rolands or St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Bruce Sutter.

Ask that same question around the Cal Poly Pomona women's tennis players and the answer's very surprising. More often than not, Carol Cox's name is spelled out.

For the unfamiliar, Carol Cox isn't seeded among the NCAA Division II women tennis players, she isn't even one of the top seeds on the Bronco's tennis squad. However, for the Broncos, Cox is just as valuable to the team as number one player Carmen Gomez Gomez.

When one of the Cal Poly netters go down, head coach Tracy Wills summons Cox out of the bullpen.

As the Broncos women's tennis team reached the midpoint in its season, Cox had yet to lose a match in her relief role.

"So far, I'm doing fine. She (Wills) just puts me in anywhere and I carry my weight," said Cox.

Had Cox opted to attend Cal State Fullerton after an outstanding tennis career at Chaffey College, she knew she would have been a top-seeded player and probably a star. But a business administration major with an emphasis on marketing, Cox chooses to transfer to Cal Poly (a school that has been a national force in women's tennis the past few years) for academic reasons.

So far, Cox has not regretted her decision.

"I love it here at Cal Poly, I've met a lot of nice people here," said Cox.

Those who knew Cox when she was at Upland High School, probably thought that she was participating in the wrong sport in college.

At Upland, Cox played field hockey ("My first love") for four years, but was more successful as a miler on the track and field team.

Cox, noted for her strong kick in the waning stages of the mile, set a school record in that event and went on the finish second in the league finals.

Her final year at Upland was the last time she was to run competitively. The following fall, she enrolled at Chaffey College and was discovered by the women's tennis coach.

Cox excelled in doubles competition and teamed up with her partner to become the league's third best tandem. In 1981, the pair lost just two matches and turned in good performances in Ojai and state tournaments.

"I choose tennis because being a miler you're more or less on your own," said Cox. "I'm more oriented to a team situation, that's why I'm better at doubles than singles. I don't feel as much pressure when I'm in a team situation."

As a pair, Cox and her boyfriend, Dwayne Davis (number one singles player at Mt. San Antonio College), have won the La Verne mix doubles championship and a few club titles in mixed doubles competition.

"We work together a lot," said Cox. "We give each other mental support and attend each other's matches. We're looking forward to the end of the season because the women's nationals will be held at Cal Poly and the junior college state finals will be at Mt. SAC."

Cox also teams with her family, which is rich in athletic tradition.

Carol's brothers Calvin and Chris excel in baseball, her mother was a basketball star in high school and her father was known for his kicking talents in football.

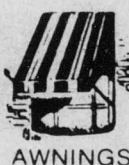

After Cox graduates next year she plans to go after her masters degree in hospital administration at UCLA, but by no means plans to give up tennis.

"It will always be a part of my life. I can play tennis until I die. It's one sport that I'll always have, she said.

Upland Legion sets registration dates

Upland American Legion manager Ray Baker has announced dates for two registration sessions for interested players along with the tryout date.

Those seeking a spot on the roster must be residents of the city of Upland and turn 18 before Aug. 18. There is no minimum age for the team.

The first of the signup dates is April 21 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Memorial Park, also the home base for the Legion squad. A second session is set for April 28 at the same hours.

According to Baker, all returning players must also register. Tryouts for the team are scheduled for May 1 at 11 a.m. at Memorial.

Hilltoppers

A summer softball league for high school girls will be holding sign-ups on April 23 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Green Belt Softball Park in Upland.

The Upland Hilltoppers Girls Softball League will have sign-up forms available at the park's snack bar. Girls in 10th through 12th grades are eligible to play.

The intercity league will have two divisions of competition. The A Division will feature varsity-level pitching. B Division teams will not be allowed to have varsity-level pitching. Tryouts will be held to determine in which division players belong.

The league will feature teams from 10-12 cities. More information is available by calling 981-1679.

Baldy View Gymnastics

A fourth-place finish in the vault by 14-year-old Glenda Smith highlighted performances by a trio of Baldy View Gymnastic team members at the recent Class II Regionals in Sunnyvale.

Smith got a 9.3 on her compulsory vault and 9.1 on her optional effort (both season highs) to earn her No. 4 finish.

Smith also finished in 14th place in the balance beam to help her take the No. 15 spot in the all-around competition at the regional event, which featured competitors from Arizona, Utah, Nevada and California.

Other Baldy View standouts were Tracy Kellogg, who was 11th in the uneven parallel bars, and Angela Carbone, who was 18th in vault.

Upland vet tries to cure pets of cancer

By Andrea Adelson

Cancer. The word has deadly connotations.

And when it's cats and dogs with malignancies, pet owners react with the same fear and dread as do humans afflicted with the disease.

Veterinarian and cancer specialist Bill Brewer of Upland's Central Veterinary hospital tries to alleviate their paranoia.

He is one of only four vets specializing in oncology — the study of tumors — in Southern California.

Like most diseases, if detected early enough some malignancies that plague animals are easily treated and cured, he says. And animals are unaffected by the psychological burden that humans carry.

Curing the pet is less difficult sometimes than convincing the owner to overcome their fear and loosen purse-strings to treat the malignancy, Brewer said. He doesn't like the word cancer.

"People have a fear and dislike for thinking about disease," said Brewer, 31, who studied at one of the west's most respected veterinary medicine schools, the University of California, Davis.

Animal cancer therapy is similar to the regime developed for people, although in reduced dosages, he said.

No mammal is immune.

White-faced cats who like to sun themselves, much like fair-skinned people, develop skin cancer.

Feline leukemia, an enlargement of lymph nodes, is similar to Hodgkin's disease.

Again like humans, the onset can be subtle, exhibited in the same seven warning signs identified by the American Cancer Society.

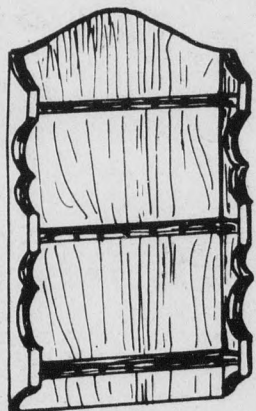

The difference, of course, is animals can't communicate.

Even among his own colleagues,

The "typical" household in the next few years will not be "typical" at all. In addition to households consisting of a mother, father and one to four children, there will also be households made up of singles, mingles, unrelated couples and empty-nesters.

What this means is new housing will be designed more specifically to the needs of each buyer-type in a manner similar to how products are designed in other industries, such as automobile and fashion.

Cluster housing, garden homes, zero-lot-line and green-belt systems will all be used in conjunction with design features such as bay windows, cathedral ceilings and skylights to produce living environments that are both exciting and affordable. Rising energy costs will lead to more energy-efficient homes designed to keep utility bills as low as possible.

With this up-turn in residential development will also come new opportunities for commercial and business growth. This will mean a lot of new jobs for all of us in the valley and will mean better availability of shopping and entertainment choices.

A common complaint now is that we sometimes have to drive out of the area to Los Angeles or Orange counties for our entertainment or shopping needs. The next two years will be marked by a great improvement in what is available right here in our own neighborhoods.

The Ontario Airport, and its surrounding area, will undergo perhaps the most dramatic change of all. Airline traffic will continue to grow at an accelerating pace and many new businesses will be relocating in 1983 and 1984 to the Rancho Cucamonga and Ontario areas adjoining the airport.

Attracted by the availability of relatively inexpensive land and access to a strong employment base these new businesses will be coming here from throughout California.

Warehouse distribution centers, transportation-related firms and new research and development complexes will be leading the way of the new developments we will soon be seeing.

A natural concern of many people will be the ability of the valley to handle the growth that will result from this upturn in our economy. The last three years have given the planning staffs and government bodies of local cities and the county ample time to make plans to handle this new activity.

Work is well underway to make sure our schools, roads, flood control systems, sewage plants and parks will be sufficient to handle this new growth.

The next few years will be a time of opportunity and optimism for all of us. The future is bright, and private industry, working together with the public sector, will do its best to make sure the lifestyle of the future, although different, will be just as desirable as it has been in the past.

Upland NEWS Thursday, April 21, 1983 29

Upland High PTSA gives service award

Paul Robertson recently received the Honorary Service Award for 1983 from the Upland High School Parent Teacher Student Association.

The award was conferred upon him in special recognition to his service to the youth of the community. Besides teaching Spanish at Upland High School, he volunteers his time as photographer for school events, organizes trips for Upland High School students and junior high school students to Caborca, Sonora, Mexico (Upland's sister city) and plans trips to Tijuana, Mexico, so students can practice their Spanish there.

He also takes students on bike trips to San Diego, coaches the annual Donkey Basketball, and served as the American Field Service advisor at Upland High School for 1981-82.

Silver Honorary Service awards were presented to Jerry McGetrick and Dr. Avrum Lapin for "making a significant contribution to our young people in a specific area."

Crime Stoppers group organizes in Upland area

By Andrea Adelson

Crime enforcers other than the men and women in blue will soon have a hand in solving crime in Upland.

The new recruits are nameless observers given a number and a monetary incentive in tipping police to information through a Crime Stoppers hotline that will begin ringing sometime in mid May.

An 11-member force of community leaders is helping launch Upland's own Crime Stoppers network, modeled after a successful program begun in Albuquerque, N.M., and now in 350 other cities nationwide.

"It's like Neighborhood Watch," Carlos Mata, president of the Upland Crime Stoppers Program, said this week. "In today's economy, the police need more help than they can get."

Crime Stoppers' directors are the support group that will pay rewards to anonymous tipsters, whose information lead police to solving a crime, Mata said. Crimes of the week are to be publicized by the media.

Fund raising efforts, calling on civic groups and local businesses, will be launched by month's end after obtaining non-profit status, he said. Incorporation papers have already been filed.

Crime Stoppers work in the dark. No names are exchanged, only a number is assigned. The caller is urged to call again after investigators check out the lead and identify themselves again only by number. If the information leads to an arrest and a complaint is issued by the district attorney, arrangements are made to turn over a cash reward.

Ontario Agent George Stipes, who administers Ontario's two-year-old Crime Stoppers program, said informants are typically paid rewards within two months.

Quick pay offs are important in building credibility with tipsters, often revengeful crooks themselves, Stipes said. Ontario Crime Stoppers hotline rings at the police station about 12 times a month, he said, totaling 251 calls in the 22 months the program has been in effect.

Those callers received $5,375 in reward money and are responsible for solving 31 crimes, including two homicides, the location of three fugitives, 10 armed robberies, two assaults and an auto theft, Stipes said.

"Even just (solving) those two homicides in one year, that would be worth it," said Upland's acting police chief, Howard Seay.

He said he doesn't care if the line is used by revenge-seekers. "I don't care who snitches who. I want the crooks," he said.

While Crime Stoppers aren't going to make much of a dent in the percentage of crimes solved, Seay said the program is nearly a cost-free way to clear up

Upland veterinarian specializes in cancer treatment

opinion is divided on cancer treatment for animals. "Some people think it's worthless," he says, although attitudes about cancer therapy are improving as the animals and their owners survive to tell the tale.

About the same percentage of animals develop cancer as do people: 200 to 300 in every 100,000.

At work in the Upland clinic since last fall, Brewer adds his expertise to 11 other vets with specialties such as exotic birds and surgery, employed by Central's three-hospital group. The others are in Pedley and Montclair. Upland alone has 22,300 animals among its clients.

"It's always a success story to tell when they live, but the biggest frustration is when we lose them," the vet says.

Cider's is a success story.

Brewer began treating a golden retriever owned by a Sunland couple for a bone tumor while he was still in Davis.

After the tumor was removed and the dog treated with radiation therapy, Cider developed a gaping chest wound. A perforated artery was repaired and the dog's chest reconstructed.

"Now, one year later, I can't say he's cured," but he's alive, Brewer said.

And yet some animals that should respond to treatment, those with a minimum amount of disease, don't.

"I don't know what it is, but (the malignant cells) have this ability to totally resist. They seem to be outsmarting you," he said.

Brewer plans a counter-offensive. He hopes to again devote some time to research on heat and radiation therapy, a therapy he began researching in Davis and has had a "fair amount" of success with.

Crime Stoppers group organizes in Upland area

some that would go unsolved otherwise.

Upland police cleared 28.7 percent of its felonies in 1982, meaning that in 859 of the 2,997 felonies committed within city limits, suspects were caught or the victims refused to press charges, according to state crime reports filed by Upland.

The national clearance rate in 1981 is 19 percent, the most recent year in which statistics have been filed, say the FBI Uniform Crime Reports.

Neighboring Ontario, with twice the population, more than twice the number of felonies, and an established Crime Stoppers program, cleared 17.5 percent of its felonies in the same year. Nearly 6,600 felonies were committed and 791 cleared last year, state crime reports said.

Ontario Capt. Bill Alwin described Upland as "more of a bedroom community, and has stable population. We don't have that small town cohesiveness," that he believes makes residents more likely to get involved and less reluctant to report what could be valuable information to police.

Crime Stoppers and WeTIP, an 11-year-old nationwide program based in Ontario, both provide a means for the public to assist police. Its a variation of a long-used police investigative tool: paying confidential informants.

"That's how it got started," Stipes said. "An Albuquerque officer got tired of paying informants out of his own pocket."

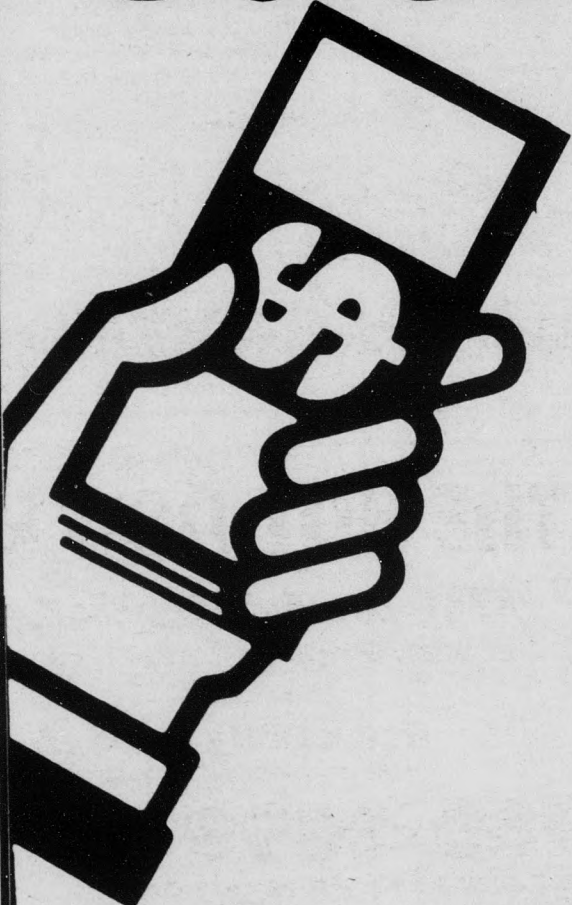

By contrast, WeTIP generates three times the number of tips turned over to Ontario police than does Crime Stoppers, assistant national director Miriam Eckert said.

She said in the last five years, the span records were kept, WeTIP callers are responsible for 165 arrests and 79 convictions in Ontario, and in Upland, 37 and 17, respectively.

WeTIP "is a way for the people who are hesitant to call direct to the police department because they may have a little gray in their background and may not want to be involved," Eckert said.

Stipes contends donations are easier to solicit for a local program, as money "is not going into some giant superfund."
